Gretchen's CGLA Volunteering Featured in the Trib

CGLA's Executive Director, Gretchen Slusser was recently featured in the Chicago Tribune in an article profiling three Chicago-based residents who began by volunteering at local nonprofits. All three women featured turned their volunteer opportunity into full-time employment.

Read Gretchen's inspiring story of how she went from running her own management consulting firm to volunteering regularly at CGLA, and eventually becoming our Executive Director. While volunteering with us not only did Gretchen give of her time, but after seeing the impact that CGLA's legal services have on low-income Chicagoans, her firm also invested a large financial gift to help us reinstate our support services that further help clients stabilize their lives and move forward.

As a follow-up to the Chicago Trib article, which notes the gift from her firm, Gretchen recently shared her thoughts on giving back and the power of locally-driven corporate contributions on our blog.
